The Aide's Role in Falls Prevention

Thursday, July 13, 2017

3:00 pm – 4:00 pm EST

Statistics show that 30% of individuals age 65 or older will experience at least one fall each year and half will suffer multiple falls with potentially devastating consequences. Injuries sustained during or after a fall are one of the most frequently occurring adverse events reported among home care clients and often result in the need for emergent care.

This webinar will discuss how paraprofessionals can reduce the risk of falls for their clients. This program will explore risk factors that contribute to the likelihood of falls and discuss methods through which paraprofessionals can easily identify and address these factors, in collaboration with other members of the interdisciplinary team. Attendees will have an opportunity to ask questions during the presentation using a chat box. This program provides a post-test.

Presenter

Cheryle Atwater, PT, MPH, COS-C.

Cheryle is an experienced speaker at state, regional and national conferences including AHEC, the Association for Home and Hospice Care of NC, Hospice of the Carolinas and the North Carolina Physical Therapy Association. Cheryle has more than 25 years of home care and hospice experience in a variety of roles from clinician to agency manager. Presently, Cheryle works in the home health and hospice industry in the areas of operations, performance improvement and regulatory compliance.
